We found that social science classes were't as boring as we had anticipated, particularly when we began to discuss current events. Through study we realized that social science deals with the problems of today in the light of tomorrow. With outside activities such as the "Conservation Contest" these courses became more enjoyable.

We made remarkable progress in our Industrial Art classes this year. We were instructed how to organize and manage a shop, how to care for the equipment, and how to cooperate with each other. Our Auto Mechanics class completed the organization of the "Hot Rod Clan."

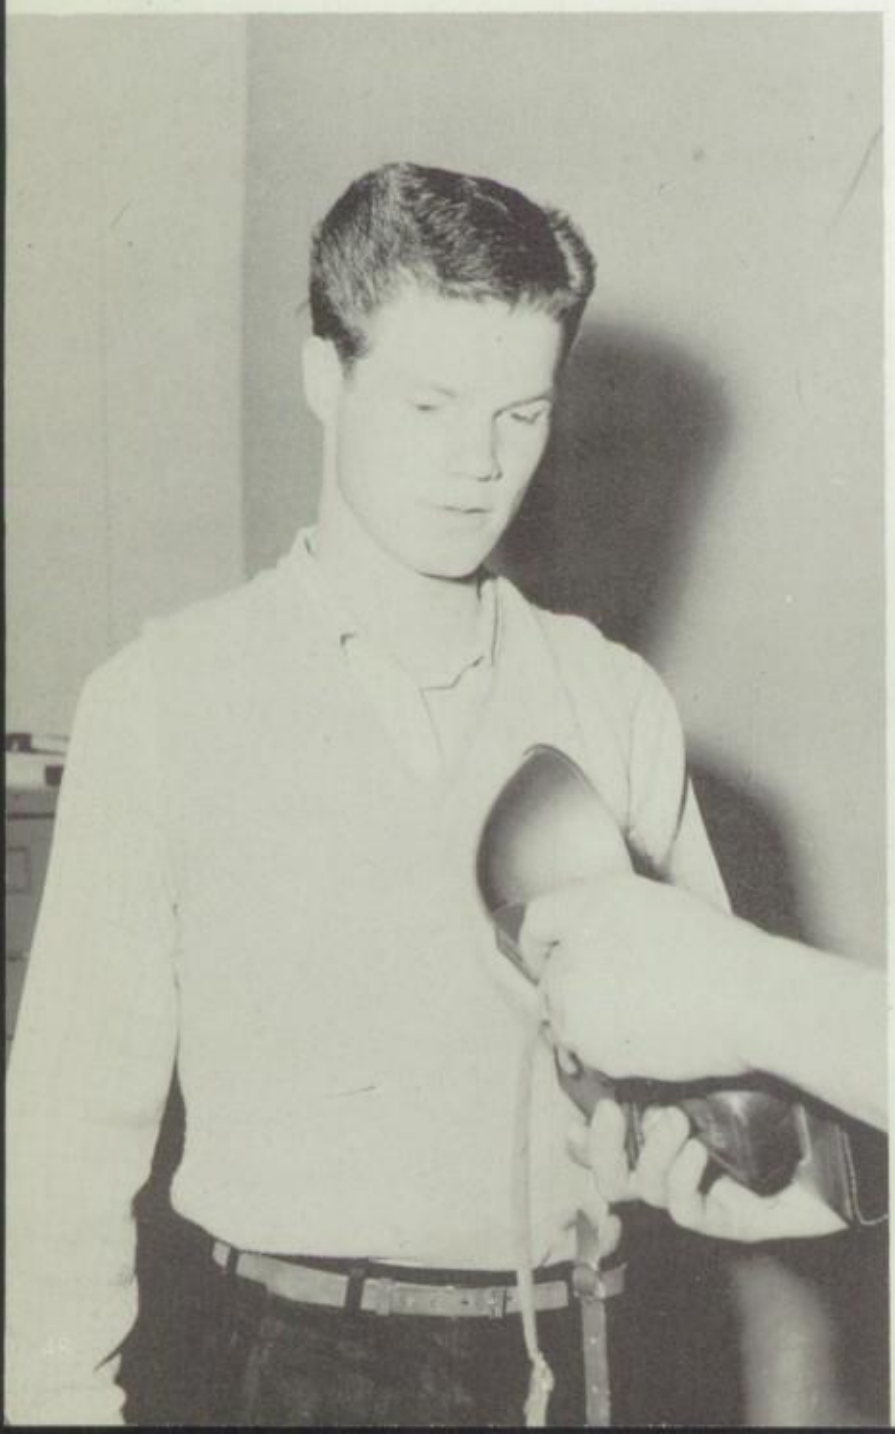
Only costs $49.75, too.



Since our minds were continually turning to the monetary side of life, Senior Retailing offered a way to obtain a job, a car, and other necessities. An adventure in facts, figures, and answers were taught to us in Business English and General Business.

To avoid complete monotony, which we all felt at the end of five weeks of labor, our classes included a course in letter construction — convenient for estranged lovers. Calculating machines, under the watchful eyes of teachers and electronic computors, proved that two and two usually does add to four.

Now what do I do!

Repeat please.

Helen Burdett

While studying modern dancing some of us thought we were incompetent, but we became happier when social dancing began. By the end of the year we improved our prowess in such sports as volleyball, basketball, and baseball. Home Nursing taught that knowledge is as effective for health as medicine.

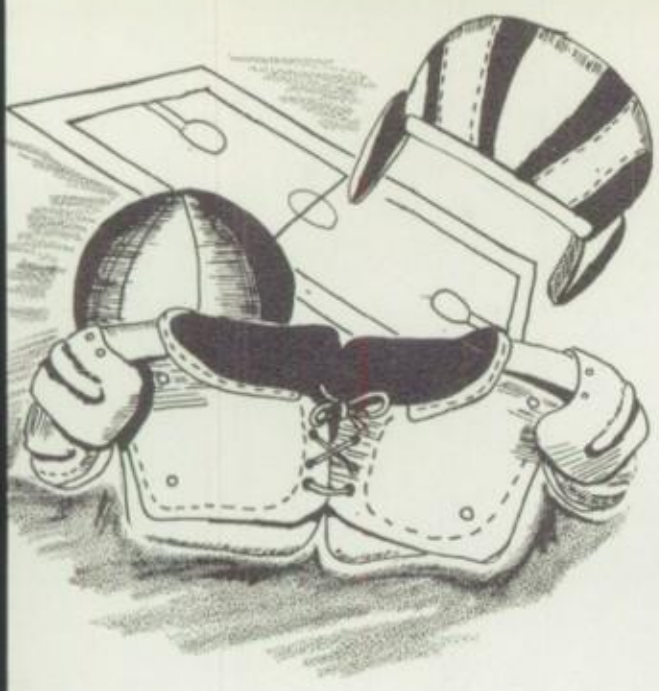
"Don't miss!"

Exercise was very beneficial.



Monte Bailey

Sportsmanship was the most important factor in playing a game. This we discovered while improving our skills in such sports as wrestling, basketball, and football. Although many strange ailments were developed, we survived and were able to enter the various class tournaments as semi-pros.

What happened to the other three?

Half Nelson — or half Bailey.

Furthering an appreciation of foreign languages was the underlying purpose used to guide us in German, French, and Spanish. Cultures and traditions were emphasized while pronunciation was developed through the use of tape recorders, songs, and thorough study. Of great interest to all were foreign celebrations, dress, and customs.

What nightmares we had trying to create a story in the creative writing class . . . but through many futile attempts some of us became successful as amateurs. In English we obtained a better understanding of our language by learning basic constructions and by studying ancient and modern literature.

Mathematics became a vivid science when formulas and equations became solid, tangible figures which we could adopt into our every-day life. No longer was it necessary to buy extra paint for the front porch for we could calculate the amount down to the last brush stroke.

In the Home Economics classes we set a goal of having a better understanding of home management in helping us become competent homemakers. The entertainments that we presented included the Fashion Show, Mothers and Daughters Tea, and the P.O. L. C. Banquet. Clothing and the cooking classes presented many shortcuts in doing housework.

Drill was the key word in the Reserve Officers Training Corps. As Cadet Officers we received leadership opportunities so we could train the men who would take our positions in the next two years. The schedule included weapon study, first aid, maneuvering, and the inevitable marching.

As young physicists and chemists we made use of the intriguing equipment in the Science Department. Fascinating experiments added some color to the studies of insectia, sedimentary rocks and trichinosis of the liver. Physics proved through many methods that Newton's apple must have been an apricot.

We had a versatile year in our speech classes. Trade was our debate question and we competed in both region and state. In studio radio we gave several radio broadcasts which turned out to be very successful. By the end of the year almost everyone learned how to be at ease before audiences.

"I wish to dispute your point."

"Just a little lower please."

Art classes gave bloom to many young Van Dykes and Angelos. Numerous art contests combined with art requests from various student body functions left us continually with outside work. In doing this, however, it gave us ample opportunity of developing our talents.

That the library was a perfect spot for doing last-minute cramming was soon found by all who used its facilities. The Library contained a basic assortment of all books. The program presented during "Book Week" was a tremendous success.

Learning to drive was more of a coordination problem, which included moving of the gear-shift while pushing the clutch and keeping our eyes on the road — or that vivacious something sitting beside the driver's seat. The course included complete briefing in law regulations and taught the rules of the road.

From the first downbeat of instructor Edward Sandgren's hand our Vocal Department performed in a superior manner. Featured were the Mixed Choir, the Boys' and Girls' Glees, and other ensemble groups. A year of musical enchantment culminated with the Department's annual Christmas and Spring Concerts and a most laudible performance in the Regional Music Festival.

Holding the batons for our Instrumental Department were instructor Jarvis Palmer and student director Harold Stites. Pep rallies were spiced with lively music as Ben Lomond's first pep band was formed this year. The band looked for the arrival of their long awaited uniforms, the design and color of which were hotly contested among students and faculty.

Developing an idea of our three officers, Sherry, Gloria, and Shaz, we added birthday cake to the menu of Federal lunch. The annual Lassie Lilt and the Spring Fashion Show were other highlights that resulted in another successful year for the girls of Ben Lomond High.

"Semper Fidelis" might be an appropriate motto of the Albonettes. As the backbone of our teams, these Scots led and encouraged the school in attending many games and school functions. Under the watchful eye of Mrs. Burdett and the planning of Carol, Connie, Dixie, and Jeanne their plaid uniforms will always remind students of loyalty.

As Lairdsmen we became prominent in the latter part of the school year, especially at our state games. Our car decorating contest led the way for student participation in school activities. Under the leadership of Craig, Niel, and Charles, and under the observation of adviser Carl Wallis, our clan encouraged the motto, "The Friendly Scots."

LAIRDSMEN

With the aid of noise makers our clan gave the student body much competition in yelling. It didn't take us long before we became noted for our pep. Athletic Clan parties were notorious as school highlights. Led by Mike, Riley, and Denny, this clan was among the top school organizations.

Earthlings changed to mer-maids during each meeting of the Swimming Clan. This change was apparent as the male members looked more like Johnny Weismuller . . . and the girls like Esther Williams, after each meeting. Through careful handling of funds by Dave, Dale, and Sue a large party was held to conclude the year's activities.

SWIMMING

With the light of Ben Hogan in our eyes, we who aspired to golfing were taught the fundamentals of the game by one of our elders. With this instruction we were amazed to find that our golf swings were greatly improved even though the ball still seemed to take the terrible slice. Under the direction of able adviser Miss Margaret Neal and officers Wendy, Kent, and JoAnn, the year of activity became even more popular as the snow melted and green grass whetted our interest.

The winter was filled with thrills, chills, and spills for all of us who were members of Ski Clan. The many spills and falls we took as beginners just made us feel better when with experience behind us we could watch others perform the same feats. A ski team under the direction of Don, Sharon, and Dick created competition among members. The season was completed with a party at Snow Basin and a trip to Alta.

Despite skinned knees, the Skating Clan held meetings each week at the Berthana Skating Rink. While learning new formations, we had a lot of fun mixing with interesting people. The Ballerinas leading the clan were Elaine and Joanne. After several meetings we became aware of the laws of physics which govern moving bodies.

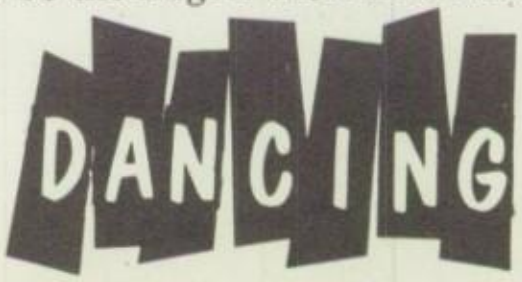
Every Wednesday marked the day that Dancing Clan met under the direction of advisers Mr. Eggleston, Mrs. Jensen, Miss Nakamura, and Mr. Favero. After lessons by professional teachers, we were permitted to practice our own little theories on dance steps. The dancing parties, under the careful planning of Jack, Barbara, and Gaye, proved to be the largest the school had ever held.



Craig, Treah, and Lynn tried to make science a subject which would be useful not only on quiz programs but in life. The many dry lectures were supplemented by interesting experiments and parties. Some of the food served at the parties was a chemical concoction designed to convert all members into Einsteins and it certainly did have its effect.

To promote friendship with those in foreign countries we made a scrapbook depicting our customs and many of the outstanding attractions in our states. At Christmas time our clan broke all previous records in preparing boxes. With the extra money we collected, we made scrapbooks and chests for other red cross organizations. With Dave, Janice, and Betty at the helm, our clan set an example for following years.

RED CROSS

BROGUE

Brogue is comprised of members from all the language classes and any others interested in foreign languages. This clan learned the fashions, foods, personalities, and traditions of other lands. Our clan started the year with a treasure hunt — clues written in foreign languages — and a dancing party. Then our clan again came to life in the spring with a canyon party where everyone had an opportunity to astound the members with his fluency in languages. After some confusion, Dixie, Betty, Lawrence, and Laurie held tight reins on our clan.

With Long Ron on the mound, Ben Lomond's diamond nine began a second year of pennant playing. The spring season brought out the score-sheets which marked the ability of our team, both in the field and behind that rubber plate. We made a success of the sport and scored in spite of the umpire.

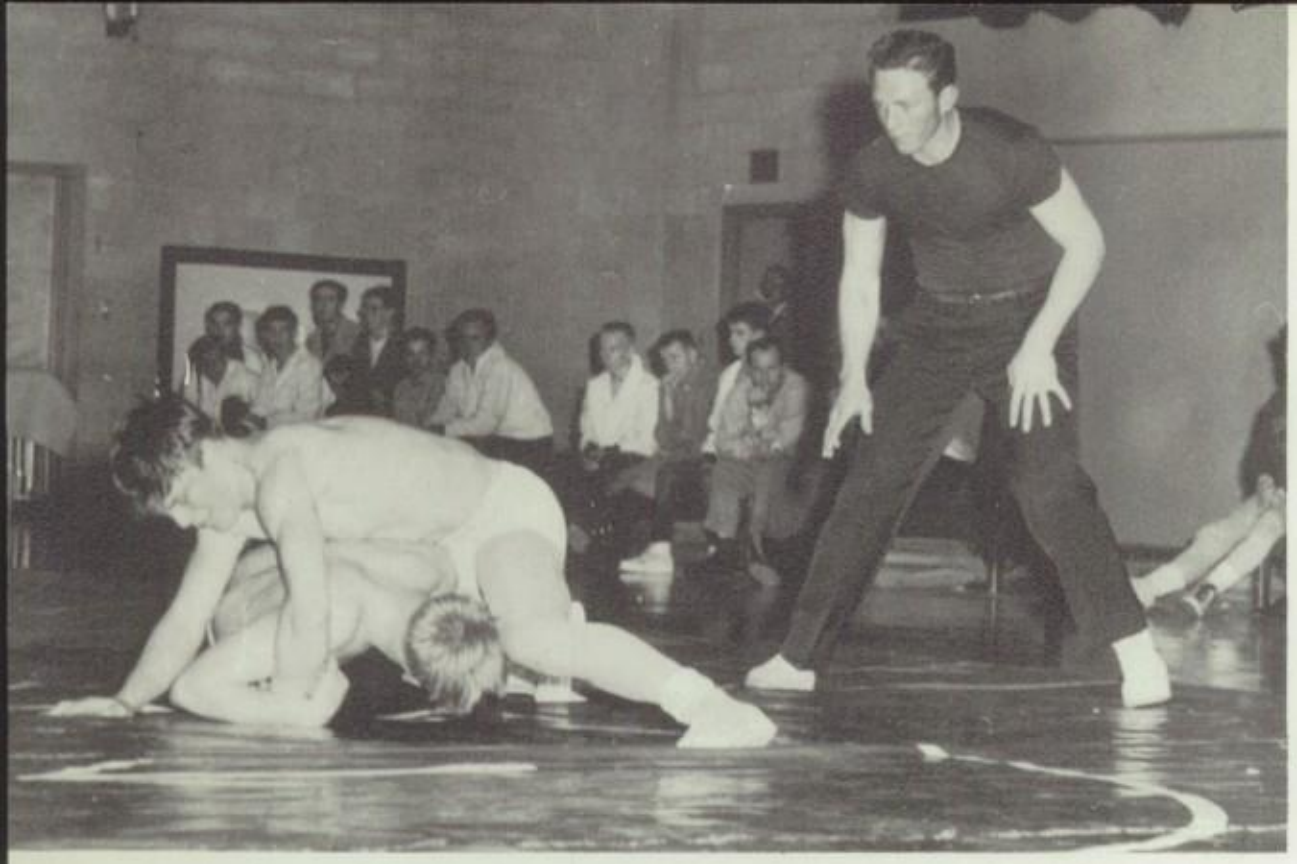
WRESTLING



"Riley . . . After his man !"

The only script used by Ben Lomond wrestlers was the voice of "Twist" yelling, "Take that hand off!" or "Get Him!" With keen competition from other schools we primed for every meet. By the time the tri-angular meet came around our enthusiasm drove home enough points to show where Ogden City's power was nestled. Several of us made showings at the State meet, and even though we didn't take state, no one, as Twist often comments, "Threw in the ? ? ?"

ASSEMBLIES

Assemblies, a new word meaning escape from Chem. exams or an opportunity to sit by a little bundle of fire and ice, were scarce but appreciated. School-sponsored assemblies featured undeveloped talents like the whistling of Dan Jones or the corny jokes by Gar, and the competition for superior showmanship was carried on between the classes. Our traveling assembly left them running for Federal Lunch while furnishing a glimpse of Ben Lomond stage life.

DANCES

Smooth mood music set the Scots' hearts afire, and the enthusiasm toward dancing grew even more popular as the year drew on. Lavish decorations greeted those who came to the gala night affairs, and rhythm from carefully selected bands made shoes especially light. Numerous matinee dances proved to be successful and were commonplace during the year. With mass instruction by gym classes, all were pleased with the dances.

We were furnished with two newspapers this year as a result of a shortage in funds. The Highlander furnished us with some information that we wanted to know and some that we didn't. The Lowlander was created as a class project, and saved our student body funds while keeping us up to date on all activities. CLANSMAN

The production of a yearbook is probably the most challenging job in a high school. It involves making dummies, selecting pictures, writing editorials, and planning the book over which, as students and graduates, we will reminisce. The satisfaction received from the smiles on student faces is indeed just compensation for the worked placed in this yearbook.

SCHOOL PLAY

An old English village is the setting for our school play, "Ladies in Retirement." The story develops around the desire of a housekeeper to have her sisters live with her in the home of a rather frivolous widow. This housekeeper, Ellen, is unsuccessful in proselyting the widow to her ideas and is forced to kill her. Attempting to keep her secret from the widow's newphew and the maid, she hides the body in the fireplace. Only when the nephew decides to steal the money which is hidden in the fireplace does the climax to this intriguing and fascinating play come.

"This is the last chorus !"

"To the dear departed."

ADMINISTRATION

The fine advice, guidance, and direction passed on by Principal Ellis McAllister, Assistant Principal Robert Alley, and Counselor Catheryn Van Meter made everyone aware of the fact that there are two straight and narrow paths; one in life — the other to the principal's door.

precious moments...

Two rosy lip prints and a blush . . . the state tournament game . . . crazy hat day . . . these are the precious moments of high school days recorded in your yearbook. A generation from now these events will loom up from the page as more than vivid recollections — thanks to the pictures, the artwork, the color, the terse prose which your editor, through the magic of lithography, has set into print.

We have enjoyed working with your splendid yearbook staff in designing and producing this volume which portrays so graphically the events of 1954 and 1955.
